

ALUMNI CAPERS

By Joa (Whaling)

News and views from the alumni crowd of 88 suggests that college life can be rough and tough as well as challenging and fun. Many Anderson University students, reports from Yale University "It is necessary to spend the absolute minimum of one hour each week outside of class." In political science alone. Steve is required to read one text book by Christmas. Impressed and amazed by his brilliant teachers, Steve is adjusting readily and to college life.

A member of the Fresh stock at Arizona State, Pam Shelly received a pleasant shock at her first month of college life. It was an "A" on an English term! Pam is majoring in journalism and works as a typewriter for the University paper. She has picked Della Cavanna Sedberry and says "The House makes us study at a designated time and place Monday through Thursday from 6 to 8 p.m. According to Pam, the Arizona campus is beautiful but the 90-100 degree weather is a little too hot for an Alaskan.

Another former J-Higher hawled weather trouble in David Katsch, who grew up in the heart of Texas at a junior college in Waco. David David where he could have some of America's wet climate instead of the hot and dry weather of Texas.

Leanne Mullan is at Sacramento State College. She is impressed with the many physically handicapped and disabled students who are attending the college. She says she really admires them, Anticipating their education when "it would be so easy to hide in a corner."

At the University of Alaska is Allan MacKinnon. He claims that there are about 15 former J-High students on the campus. So he feels right at home. Allan is still keeping up his photographic work taking pictures for the school paper and yearbook. In his senior year at J-High, Allan was J-High and Tetra photographer.

Steve Evans, the red-headed boy with the big brown eyes, is a chemical engineering student at Parsons College in Fairfield, Iowa.

SENIORS FEATURE NEW ATTIRE IN DRESS-DOWN DAYS

You just never know what to expect from those Seniors! One day they're dressed like brats—the next they're mourning the eighth week of school with all black.

From scrappy vests, advertising the great class of '62', to somber black, the upperclassers looked as though they had taken in from Bismarckville on Senior Devs Down Day.

Black Day was even worse—all that could be seen was a bit of black coming down the halls. This was especially effective at the lunch tables and in the Senior Section of the Study Hall.

What will those Seniors ever dream up next?

SENIOR PAY OME... HER CAR OF THE MONTH

HOT RODS ANYONE!

Does the junk collector keep looking over your neck when you leave it on the street overnight? Is that what's troubling you, Henry?

Yes, there comes a time in every hot rodder's life when he decides he wants something different. The "hoon" he has been driving has begun to look a little stale along side one of the European beauties. Now he has a few leveling engines with four carbs but what good does it do if only he had his mechanical know about it? What we're trying to say is that custom styling goes hand in hand with a styled up engine.

Any car's appearance can be given a lift through the use of tasteful customizing work. Special emphasis should be placed on the under-

"Fronting" is a popular method of altering a car's look for two reasons. First it is a comparatively simple process, and second, with a little practice, desirable results can be obtained.

Relocating tail lights especially on the older models gets the illusion of a lower, wider car. The famed Cadillac design led, during which everyone was transplanting Cadillac coil springs on anything but had four wheels showed that good wheelmanship is never a substitute for bad taste. The time spent making over customizing changes will pay off when you get to the job itself.

FRONT END CHANGES

Grill modifications usually go a long way toward changing the lines of a car. Here again taste plays an important part. Biting down twisted in head and trunk all help to get rid of excess lines.

Here then are a few simple changes which can be used to modify your car. If used with good taste they can change your car from a drab looking stock model to a car anyone would be proud to own.

303 Horsepower Marks Nov. Car of the Month

Member's car of the month a '62 Edsel Corvair owned by Sen. Pat O'Neil is a real horsepower on wheels.

Reeling up the wind is a 303 cubic inch best-in-class rated at 303 brake horsepower. A four-wheel carb makes the fuel for the mile. The outside of Pat's "motor" is a turquoise and white two-door hatchback. For a little combat while riding out the storms of Juneau, the turquoise interior has a carbon, leather, and even boots TUBS-OSSE coupe.

Pat bought the car in Bellevue, Washington while on a vacation this past summer. It was shipped to Juneau via Alaska Steamship Company.

Mme. Tuslands Museum of Wax Creations At Seattle for Century 21 Exposition

Statues of persons from many eras of history are displayed at Tuslands Wax Museum at Seattle, a branch of the central museum located in London.

This haven for human regimens was was originated by Mme. Tuslands in the eighteenth century. She started her work in France by later transported her collection to London. There are subsidiaries of this art center in cities of England, Canada, and the United States.

Famous screen stars are depicted in the production they made recent Norma Shearer comes to life as her character in "Barry of Wimpole Street". Jean Harlow

After being in prison together for many years, the inmates are freed of housing the same jail over and over, so they invented a system when, instead of telling the whole joke they would sell out a number and everyone would laugh.

One day a new prisoner decided to try the system, and when the opportunity arose, he belittled "Duckie".

There was a dead silence and when he asked why his cell mate answered "You just don't know how to tell 'em!"

"The Angel", Charles Gable and Vivian Lenzi in "Come With the Wind" and Rudolph Valentino in "The Sheik". All memories of stars of the past. Representing the glamorous decades also include 34 stars including Douglas Fairbanks, Sr. and Will Rogers.

Mrs. Tuslands' waxed figures are present in scenes reminiscent of their time. Queen Victoria is seated in her throne with Dorelli standing by. Queen Elizabeth of England is pictured in a similar scene. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Sir Winston Churchill and General De Gaulle. Famous figures of the twentieth century are seated at a round table discussing plans. Chiang Kai-shek, Aung Mye, and Marlon of India. The twentieth century leaders of world aggression are standing nearby.

The waxworks, life-like expressions of the famous in the scene of the Last Supper make the Apostles seem one of the most popular in the museum.

The Seattle museum of wax creations, brought to the city for the Century 21 Exposition, was, according to reports, one of the main points of interest to be found in Seattle in connection with the Fair.

KORHONEN CHALLENGES J-HIGH TO ACCEPT COURT SYSTEM

After the proceedings held yesterday by the Citizenship Committee, a sudden interest in student government developed. Opponents who moved immediately with petitions demanding that the Citizenship Committee's power and purpose be explained. The power and purpose of the committee was stated at an earlier student body assembly. Apparently some people did not listen. I will now comply with the demands of the petition for their benefit.

First, the powers of the committee. The committee is appointed by myself and students can remove or actual power. It is, however, in co-operation with the administration and has received the right to recommend action when deemed necessary. The committee has no real power—but it can recommend. Since the committee does have very close co-operation with the administration, it is administrative respect and action taken by the committee and to co-operate fully.

Second, the purpose of the committee. Action taken by the committee do not benefit personally any member of this committee or the committee as a whole. Although J-high's social reputation is not too good, the academic record is pretty good. Last summer a very fine student of ours went up to the University of Alaska for a science course while there, a person said to him, "You're from J-high, aren't you?" "Do you doubt?" This example of the reputation of our school is the general opinion of their people in any place we have been. You, as an individual, must see if you approve or disapprove of this reputation.

Thirdly, who is going to be elected and how does this committee operate? Should any student ever that might reflect back upon the general student body then persons involved may be called forward to testify. The testimony of the witnesses, or any other evidence that they may be brought up, should determine the issue on which the committee will take action. Evidence is needed before anything can be done. The person who is testifying before the committee has the right to call in any of his own witnesses, or to produce any other evidence that he might have. The committee deals only with truth. There is quite a difference between so-called equalizing and giving a truthful answer to a straight forward question. The witness is completely free within the sphere of the subject being dealt with he is not pressured into anything. All proceedings between the committee and the individual will be considered privileged communication by the committee.

The committee is made up of five members, with myself as chairman. I have no vote as chairman but conduct the meeting and ask a question and then. Should one or more of the committee members disqualify himself from any hearing, then I will have a vote if there is anything of the witness by committee members. If at any time the witness has nothing else to say, the hearers, he is free to do so. After the committee is through with the questioning, and the witness has nothing else to say, the hearing is closed. This is how the committee functions. Nothing or no one is intimidated, a witness has every opportunity to say anything he wishes and there are no hush hearing tactics used.

Now, who shall this committee affect? I feel that an elected leader of the school, these students holding A-B-B officers, class officers, cheerleaders and any other elected person should be responsible to the committee. This would include athletic activities as well as scholastic activities. Students who held responsible positions should make themselves worthy of that position. A few sacrifices must be made in order to gain any good. It is up to the individual if he wishes to accept responsibility or not. If he does accept such a position he must have a sense of responsibility, loyalty to the school and the constitution, and good character and honesty. This person should have nothing to hide. At the beginning of the basketball season we always hear the cry for school spirit. Well then, let the cheerleaders and the basketball players join in improving the fundamentals. People who held offices represent you as an individual. What kind of person are you? Cooperation and as honest effort can go a long way toward clearing up our school reputation. I ask you to work for a better school by supporting the Citizenship Committee. We are not trying to punish anyone, we are just trying to clear up the school and have students accept responsibility. These students who do not wish to accept the full responsibility of that position should resign in the best interests of the student body. By backing a plan such as the Citizenship Committee, you, the individual, can do your part in making a better J-High.

Since you now are informed a second time of the purpose of the committee, I ask the leader of the opposition to come forward and meet me. The petition currently being circulated does not have the proper thought and I think we can work together to draft a new petition. In proper form I am anxious to see what percent of the student body is prepared to sign the petition, as the sooner the leaders meet with me in Room 203, the better. Before each group, there must be a leader, and I want the leader to come, not all of the opposition as Mr. Bosack's office is able to sign.

Due to these statements, appears to the Student Courts met with the President and representatives have been made in the interests of both parties.
